SMART STRATEGY

It is generally presumed in Virginia that Congressman Colgate Darden is the odds on favorite to win the Democratic nomination for the governorship this August. So, more than usual interest will attend him in his campaign and many will eagerly await his pronouncements.

We understand that Mr. Darden will delay formally opening his campaign until late spring or early summer. That seems to us good strategy on his part. Regardless of the importance of state and local issues to be decided in the primary, the fact remains that the attention of Virginians as well as that of all other Americans, is focused on Europe and our national defense effort. An vigorous campaign of 60 days should suffice and we anticipate that that is just what Mr. Darden contemplates.

ROAD TO HOLIDAY LAKE

We would like to see the efforts of the Virginia Conservation Commission to have the State Highway Commission take over and maintain the roads into Holiday Lake meet with success. We believe that the highway department has the equipment and personnel to maintain the roads in the area. There are 31 miles of roads in the Appomattox-Buckingham Forest area, now leased by the federal government to the state, and we doubt if the conservation commission cares to go into the road maintaining business on that big a scale.

We further trust that the question of who is to maintain the Holiday Lake road will be decided soon, so that it may be improved ere the heavy traffic expected over it this season begins.

SENATOR BYRD'S VIEWS ON THE NATIONAL DEBT

We are in accord with the views of Senator Harry Flood Byrd on the financial condition of the federal government. As usual, Senator Byrd speaks with authority on fiscal matters, and his address before the Senate last week should not be overlooked in the spotlight focused on the lease-lend bill.

Senator Byrd said: "At this time when we are faced with colossal new expenditures for our own national safety, we should examine the financial situation confronting this country and make plans to protect our future. We must preserve the solvency of the Federal Government and prevent an uncontrolled inflation, the terrors and evils of which we cannot realize. It would be human disaster second only to war."

While we agree with the views of Senator Byrd, we are frankly doubtful if what he advocates will be done. We are still on a great spending spree. Instead of easing, the tempo will accelerate. Defense expenditures will force the debt up to 100 billions of dollars within 18 months. There will be such a wave of war prosperity that no one will bother about the debt except men like Senator Byrd who are students of fiscal policies. And if we go to war, as many think we are going to do, the national debt will run between 125 and 150 billions by the time we get out. And if we don't go to war and the debt stops at 100 billions (the fact that the debt will go to 100 billions regardless of war or peace might as well be accepted) there will be a big demand that the federal government keep up its deficit financing as a permanent policy. And that demand will be hard to beat on election days.

Senator Byrd points out that in 1929 governmental debt amounted to $277 per capita. At our current debt limit it will be $700 for each man, woman and child in the United States. It is regrettable but true that even so, mighty few are interested.

We see no reason to kid either ourselves or our readers. The signs point to murky financial waters and ere we reach shore a lot of former theories are going to be changed, either up or down.

BRITON'S GOOD HEALTH

Last fall it seemed inevitable that serious epidemics would occur this winter among the people of Britain, especially those cooped up in air raid shelters at night. Fortunately, this has not happened so far, although it is still too early to become optimistic over the situation.

It is a report a few days ago by the Ministry of Health that was stated that there was less sickness in Britain in 1940 than in the pre-war year of 1938. Scarlet fever, diphtheria and dysentery cases dropped nearly one third, while pneumonia increased only about two per cent, in spite of the severity of the early winter.

Cerebro-spinal fever showed a large percentage of increase, but the total number of cases has not been great, and its death rate has been reduced from the former alarming 60 per cent to only 5 per cent, through the magical results of a new sulfanilamide treatment.

Since the report was compiled there has been considerable influenza which, as in the United States, has generally been of a mild form. Medical authorities warn, however, that the next two or three months may see an increase in disease, owing to overcrowding and poor sanitary conditions in many of the air raid shelters, especially in the poorer and much bombed districts of the East End of London.

Improvement in shelters has been made as conditions have permitted, and evacuation to rural areas is now made compulsory in certain cases. What will happen if and when Hitler makes his big invasion attempt cannot be imagined, but that the ordeal will be terrible is a foregone conclusion. —From Peninsula Enterprise.

THE DILEMMA

Mr. Hoover has once again recast his food plan and now makes it public in the latest form. But there are some of the earlier objections may have been met by the modifications, one rather disturbing question still goes unanswered. Why should he be making broadcast speeches about it to the people of the United States? It expressly calls for no action by our government, no use of American shipping, not even any contributions by the public. What is the reason for these appeals to an American opinion which is not asked to have any part in the actual working of the scheme? If, as Mr. Hoover declares, the scheme is now so safeguarded that Germany will derive no advantage from it, if it will in no way "prolong the duration of Britain," if it will help to keep alive the spirit of resistance to Hitlerism in the enslaved states, surely Mr. Hoover has the ability and standing to make the British government see those things without the aid of a nation-wide hook-up in the United States. Mr. Churchill is no fool, and these are exactly the objects which he declares as much as any man.

But if Mr. Hoover tends to exaggerate the efficacy of his safeguards, if he is mistaken in thinking that the scheme would not prejudice the British defense, how could American public opinion possibly have anything to do with it? It is unthinkable that an American popular agitation should be raised to browbeat the British into acquiescing, against their better judgment, in a scheme which was embarrassing and potentially dangerous to them at the moment when the United States is being forced for its own safety to strain every nerve in Britain's aid. It might be different if it was a matter calling for any action by this country. As it is, here is the dilemma: If the plan is really sound and will work as its authors say it will, there is no need for a popular agitation here; if not, then the American public is really being urged, in effect, to act as a bludgeon to force the British into doing something that would be deeply inimical to the vital interests and declared policy of the United States. That is certainly not a role which American opinion can take any risk of filling. —From N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

JESUS CALLS TO PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 18:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lord, teach us to pray. Luke 11:1.

Imitations may be so clever as to cause us to marvel, but to the one who knows the real thing, they are just imitations." Particularly is that true in the realm of the spiritual. Make-believe faith in God fools only the hypocrite and those who know as little as he does of real Christianity.

Prayer is undoubtedly the greatest privilege of the Christian, putting him and his life in touch with the omnipotence of God. But it must be real prayer, not just some formal exercise which masquerades under the name of prayer. We combine the two parables of our lesson to contrast prevailing prayer and powerless prayer.

I. Prevailing Prayer.

The prayer which really lays hold upon God and brings results must be the expression of a life of prayer. It is no occasional effort brought about by a great need or a day of sorrow. We must pray

1. Without Ceasing (v. 1). Jesus had just been talking of the trying days which were to come (Luke 17:26-30). To stand fast for Christ in a day when almost all the influences are against such faith, a man needs real prayer or he will surely faint.

To pray constantly is not necessarily to be saying the words of prayer, but is the outreach of the life toward God, the setting of our minds on things above. That we can and may do at all times and in all places.

2. With Assurance (vv. 2-9). If an unjust judge will respond just to escape the constant plea of a widow, we may rest assured that God, who is just and looks upon His people in loving-kindness, will not fail to respond to their plea. He says, "Call unto me, and I will answer you, and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3).

3. In Humility (vv. 13, 14). We come to God, not to demand, but in humbly plead the blood of Jesus Christ. That was what the publican did. When he said, "Lord, be merciful," he used the word "propitiation," which means the mercy seat on which the blood was sprinkled as a propitiation for sin (see Exod. 25:17, 18, 21; Heb. 9:5; Lev. 16:5). Such a plea brought salvation to the repentant sinner.

II. Powerless Prayer.

We use the word prayer here in the broad sense, for strictly speaking there is no such thing as prayer without power. Men call it prayer, but it accomplishes nothing because it is offered

1. In Self-sufficiency (vv. 9, 11). Those who trust "in themselves" will naturally do what the Pharisee did; he "prayed with himself." "He had an intellectual conviction, but had an intellectual conviction, but had an intellectual contact with God. Hell is full of intellectual conviction. God? Yes. But he was so occupied with himself he could not get away from himself" (Morgan).

2. With Boastful Pride (vv. 9, 11, 12). Despising others, the Pharisee boasted of his own fine character and good works. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble" (James 4:6). It is proper that a man should live uprightly, but if it only makes him self-righteous it becomes a barrier between him and God (Luke 18:14).

3. For the Sake of Publicity (v. 11, cf. v. 13). While the publican hung his head and stood afar off to offer his prayer, the Pharisee apparently took a prominent place and spoke with a loud voice. Jesus described that kind of prayers in Matthew 6:5 as just putting on a publicity "stunt." When men had seen them pray, the transaction was finished. They had not been in touch with God at all.

The result of the two prayers is so well described by Dr. J. Campbell Morgan that we quote his words:

"Two men at prayer. One, eloquently, in phrases circling round his own personality with which he was pre-eminently pleased. The other, hating his sin, and grasping out after the infinite and tender compassion of God to operate for him.

"The man who justified himself remained unjustified. The man who sought the compassion of God went back to his house justified."

There Is Another Life

I cannot believe, and cannot be brought to believe, that the purpose of our creation is fulfilled by our short existence here. To me the existence of another world is a necessary supplement of this, to adjust its inequalities, and imbue it with moral significance.—Thurlow Weed.

Only Eight Face Types, Noted Artist Declares

What kind of a face have you? According to a new book, entitled "Faces," by Eddie Sena, famous Hollywood makeup artist, all human faces fall into eight basic types. There are, he says, four types of long faces and four types of short faces.

Few persons have faces which conform exactly to the ideal types, but nearly everybody can improve his or her face. With women the arrangement of hair and skillful makeup often can improve vastly the facial appeal. Men, although denied makeup, can strengthen their facial qualities by dressing the hair thoughtfully. Both sexes find a wide field for facial improvement in eyeglasses. With nearly a half of the adult population wearing spectacles, in recent years much attention has been given to the artistry of fitting spectacles to faces. By skillful shaping of the lenses frequently weak facial structures can be softened, desirable qualities emphasized. Nearly 100 illustrations in the book demonstrate the influence of coiffures, cosmetics, millinery and spectacles upon faces of the various types. This unusual book is published by the Better Vision Institute, New York city.

Electric Tattoo Invented To 'Fingerprint' Dogs

Did you ever experience loss of your dog and then were unable to identify him because several dogs were similar to yours?

You no longer will have that difficulty, according to the National Bureau of Canine Identification. The bureau is working out a plan where every dog will be numbered. The number will be written on the dog's leg with an electric pen and recorded by the bureau.

The bureau will keep its records on small cards, as police files are kept. The card will contain the name of the owner, address, phone number, dog's name, breed, sex, location of the marking and the number itself.

The number used will be one of a serial, no two alike, with the serials running from A to Z, with each veterinarian having an individual serial.

Other methods of identification are not foolproof, the bureau says. Nose-printing doesn't work efficiently because when a nose-printed dog is lost every dog of its description has to be nose-printed to find the lost one with any degree of certainty.

Old College Rules

College life has certainly changed. Southwestern university authorities agreed after studying the catalogues and bulletins of the school during the past century.

In 1856 students were required to sign a pledge certifying that they had delivered to the president all of their concealed weapons.

In the 1890s students were required to attend three daily prayer services, the first of which was held at 5 a. m. Students who absented themselves from the early morning devotional forfeited their breakfasts.

Faculty members generally agree that one of the best regulations of those early days was: "All boys guilty of fighting are required to kiss in the presence of the president and entire student body."
